

Sinclair Broadcasting's directive to its affiliates to air "Stolen Honor" before the election is an outrage and abuse of their position as administrators of a public forum. This is really a contribution to the Bush campaign and an attempt to sway the election results through unbalanced, unequal broadcast time masquerading as news.

My question to the board of the FCC is "whose air waves are they anyway?" This is an outrage and a demonstration of the commitment of some to so poison the political environment within this country that as a nation we remain polarized regardless of the outcome of the election.

I have a personal test for doing the right thing. Maybe the members of the board would like to take it. Turn on the light in the bathroom mirror where the light is the least faltering and state the ethical dilemma you face. If your face turns red, or you need to turn your eyes away it doesn't pass and you need to face up to the fact it is wrong. No member of the Sinclair group can currently pass the RED FACE test.

Sincerely
